The Artist and Researcher as Activist

Title: The Artist and Researcher as Activist

Date: Tuesday, Feb. 19, 2019 | 7-8 pm ET

WATCH IT HERE

The Professional Learning Through Research (PLR) working group has curated a dynamic webcast of five art educators who will speak to a variety of topics that will be applicable for NAEA members across all divisions. This online event casts art educators in the varying identities they embody through their activism and research. Presenters will provide accessible, relevant examples through research methods such as narrative inquiry, arts-based research, and autoethnography. All educators from all backgrounds and contexts are invited and encouraged to attend this session and realize their potential to enact change through art and research.

Please note that participation in this webcast does not provide NAEA professional development credit.

Presenters:

Heidi C. Powell, EdD

Heidi Powell is director of graduate studies for the University of Florida's online art education program. She currently researches globally and most recently was a Jewish National Fund (JNF) faculty fellow to Israel. Learn more at <https://arts.ufl.edu/directory/profile/118043>

Susannah Brown, PhD

Susannah Brown inspires academic excellence and commitment to community through arts engagement. Cross-disciplinary research in art education and teaching diverse learners propels her forward as an engaged faculty member and mentor for her students at Florida Atlantic University.

Gloria J. Wilson, PhD

Gloria J. Wilson is visiting professor of art education at Virginia Commonwealth University. A Fulbright recipient, she uses critical arts-based approaches in her research and teaching. Her work addressing the intersections of race and arts education participation has been presented nationally and internationally.

Justin P. Sutters, PhD

Justin Sutters has been an art educator for the past twenty years, including time as a K-12 educator in the US and abroad. He is an assistant professor and director of the Master of Arts in Teaching (MAT) program at George Mason University. His research can be found at <https://gmu.academia.edu/justinsutters>

Trina Harlow, M.A.A.Ed.

Trina Harlow has been an art educator for 26 years, teaching K-12 art in Texas and now as an instructor and coordinator of the art education program at Kansas State University (KSU). She is a KSU doctoral candidate and will defend her dissertation in May 2019.
